SUHI Research Fellows

Now accepting applications for the 2020 SUHI Research Fellows program!

Purpose
Through this program, we aim to improve SUHI’s research capabilities, as well as to strengthen ties with local scientists and universities who share a focus on improving health equity in Chicago. Fellows get the chance to experience our unique, community-focused research center and to work on specific research projects related to advancing health equity.

Fellowship Activities
Fellows generally spend one day a week at SUHI, collaborating on manuscripts, proposals, and other projects. Specific deliverables for the year are jointly developed during the first month. They are based on both SUHI needs and Fellow’s interests and career goals. Fellows are considered part of the SUHI team and are invited to participate in all SUHI research meetings and events.

Eligibility and Selection Criteria
Candidates must have a PhD and be on the faculty at a local college or university. Current priorities include, but are not limited to, the following areas of expertise:
- Cost benefit analysis or health economics
- Latinx health
- Qualitative or mixed methods analysis
- Evaluation and health impact assessment

Details and Key Dates
The Fellowship runs from January 1 – December 30, 2020. Fellows will receive a stipend of $15,000. Applications are due no later than October 31, 2019. Early applications are encouraged. Notifications will be sent by November 22, 2019.

How to Apply
To be considered, please submit a CV and cover letter to pophealthtraining@sinai.org. In the cover letter, please address why you would be a good candidate and how your work aligns with SUHI’s.
